You can pay $50 for a .The present invention relates to an ink-jet recording apparatus and an ink ejection method, and particularly, to an ink-jet recording apparatus and an ink ejection method by which the amount of ink ejected through ink ejection ports is controlled so that the recorded image is obtained in a favorable density and in a favorable color balance. An ink-jet recording apparatus is, for example, known in which a liquid such as an ink is ejected in the form of droplets from ejection ports provided on a recording head onto a recording material such as a paper to record an image. In the ink-jet recording apparatus, the ejection state of the ink is stabilized after the stop of printing by forming the head surface with an air bubble by the method such as suction method or vibration method. In this method, however, a considerable amount of time is required to stabilize the ejection state because of the application of a relatively strong force to the head surface. In order to overcome the above-mentioned drawback, there has been suggested an ink-jet recording apparatus having an ejection state stabilizing device for stabilizing the ejection state of the ink at a high speed as disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open Nos. 56-146926 and 58-107343. In the apparatus having the ejection state stabilizing device, as shown in FIG. 1, the ink is ejected while the ink is so evaporated that its viscosity is lowered, from the recording head 10 in which a plurality of ink ejection ports are arranged, onto a recording material 21 on which an image is recorded through the ink is ejected therefrom. In this case, a film 20 formed of a resin or the like is interposed between the ink ejected from the ejection ports and the recording material. As a result, the viscosity of the ink is lowered to form the ejection state 3e33713323
